We can help more homeless veterans have homes by donating things, connecting them to organizations, and helping them get jobs.

We can donate tents, pillows, and blankets to substitute for a house. We can donate gloves, boots, snow pants, and earmuffs for in the winter. We can donate food, drinks, and other items. We can donate money to the veterans themselves, food pantries, and shelters.

We can connect veterans to organizations in the community. What I mean by connect to is bringing homeless veterans to them. Some organizations we can connect to are the Red Cross, American Legion and the county veteran services office.

We can also help homeless veterans find a doctor if they need one.
We can help veterans get jobs by getting them a mailbox or getting them a newspaper so they can look for job openings. We can help get them training. We can have a place where they can use a computer with Internet and a phone.

As you can tell, donating to veterans, connecting them to organizations, and helping them get jobs are good ways to help homeless veterans. There are a lot more ways that we can help homeless veterans today.
