Milan Oosthuizen
How to Help Veterans

It is a major problem in the U.S.A that veterans are homeless after fighting for our country. We need a way to stop this, the people that fight for our lives and country need to have a place to stay. No veteran should not have a place to call home. Around 38,000 veterans don’t have a place to stay in the U.S.A.

The elderly in our country need support and company. People have researched that older people have a shorter life when they are lonely and don’t have a companion. Senior citizens are often lonely in their own homes and are very resistant to go to a nursing home. They need help with doing things around the house and want company. I have a solution that could help this problem.

Where these two problems meet there is a solution. The Veterans can stay in homes of seniors, giving them a place to stay. The elderly can have company and help around the house making it much easier. The veterans could bring them on walks and have conversations with them. They could start making friendships and eventually be companions. The veterans would have amazing and interesting stories to tell the seniors. For both it is a good solution and easier for the government and the nursing homes.

This solution can help the major problem in the U.S.A involving the veterans. Both veterans and seniors can be helped with this idea, making them very happy.